BUILDING CONVENTION AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

More Than 100 Register for Big Day

Alumni Join In Annual Party at Campus

In numbers that exceeded even last year's turnout, St. Joseph's alumni returned to the campus for a two-day reunion Aug. 15-16.

Among those who signed the register in the Rec hall are:

Father Conroy Heads Alumni

The Rev. James M. Conroy, associate editor of Our Sunday Visitor, Huntington, Ind., will succeed Henry Contant of Richmond, Ind., as president of the St. Joseph's alumni association. The annual election was held during the two-day reunion, Aug. 15-16.

Other new officers are Thomas Medland, Logansport, Ind., first vice president; Clarence Sieben, Chicago, second vice president; and nominating committeemen Richard Scharf and Rev. Henry Martin, C.P.P.S., both of St. Joseph's faculty.

Exhibitors and Delegates Demand Return Engagement

St. Joseph's Praised for Great Service to Church and Business

More than 2,200 pastors, religious superiors, and college officials from 33 states, two Canadian provinces, and four foreign countries gathered in Chicago, June 30, July 1, 2, and 3, at the Stevens Hotel for the first National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition. Architects, contractors, and manufacturers of building materials, furnishings and equipment joined the administrators to discuss details of the Catholic Church's gigantic building program which will average about one billion dollars a year for the next ten years, according to the Business and Industry Foundation of the college of St. Joseph's of Indiana, sponsor of the convention and exposition.

Cardinal Stritch Gives Keynote Address

In a program keyed by His Eminence Samuel Cardinal Stritch of Chicago, the administrators heard a long list of building and allied industry authorities address the convention's five general sessions which covered planning, architecture, construction and materials, equipment, and the general outlook. Five major panel sessions were also conducted covering remodeling, the church, the school, the institution and the recreation center.

In his opening address, Cardinal Stritch commended St. Joseph's of Indiana for its service to the church and suggested that the convention and exposition be held again in 1949. Cardinal Stritch said the need for churches, schools and institutions was greater than ever and urged that buildings be kept simple yet combine majesty and dignity.

"If we are to meet our needs," the churchman continued, "there must be simple churches which shall not be mistaken for hangars; schools with a dignity the factory building does not boast, and institutions which future generations will not liken to the very

Dedication

His Eminence, Samuel Cardinal Stritch, in his keynote address at the first National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition, expressed the need of this type of meeting in the words, "We have had national Catholic educational meetings, we have had meetings in the interest of other Catholic activities, but never concerning the important area of Catholic building." His Eminence continued to say that a meeting of this sort is so obviously needed that it was strange it had never been attempted before.

He expressed congratulations to St. Joseph's of Indiana for its courage in sponsoring the project and expressed his conviction that the assistance given by this type of convention would be invaluable to administrators of church property and he voiced the hope that the project would be repeated in his episcopal city.

The members of the hierarchy who had consented to act as presiding officers at some of the sessions of the convention spoke in their introductions, in appreciation, in commendation and in praise of the project. In the course of the convention and exposition a questionnaire was passed to the delegates and to the exhibitors to inquire concerning the value of the convention and the advisability of continuing it in the future. The replies to the questionnaires were all enthusiastic endorsements of the service and of its continuance.

In the closing address Bishop Marling, Auxiliary Bishop of Kansas City, Missouri, summarized the achievements of the convention and spoke of its future. Having been advised of the impressive commendations of the exhibitors and the delegates, he promised in the name of the sponsors that the convention would be repeated with a program that would surpass that of 1948. So the convention just concluded becomes the first in a series of such meetings.

St. Joseph's, in sponsoring the National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition, has in mind the value of a public service to the church in the United States, to religious superiors, to school officers, to pastors—to all, in brief, who deal with Catholic building or remodeling problems.

The convention project is an earnest effort to bring to administrators of building funds the best of architectural knowledge, the best of construction genius, the best of advice on materials, on equipment, and on furnishing. The exposition is an attempt to bring to the notice of those who deal with construction and furnishings the various types of materials which may be utilized to realize the objective of which the Cardinal spoke as beauty, efficiency and economy in Catholic edifices.

St. Joseph's plans a continued service stretching over the period of time intervening between conventions by acting as a clearing house for inquiries. These inquiries will be directed to authorities in specified fields.

To beauty, to efficiency, and to economy in Catholic buildings the National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition is dedicated.

Alumni Quickies

Many of the Chicago Bears currently training on St. Joseph's campus are back for the fifth successive year . . . they act just like loyal alumni, pointing out latest SJC improvements—Rec hall, post office, warehouse, etc.—to newer members of owner-coach Halas' squad. . . . Some of the 240-pound Bears are just as happy in their Seifert Hall quarters as ordinary St. Joe freshmen half their size. . . . The Bears, Sid Luckman in particular, probably study harder than most students, and Luckman knows gridiron strategy better than most athletes. . . . A few of the Bears, ordered to muster at St. Joseph's Wednesday noon, turned up rather over-eagerly at 12:30 a.m. same day. . . . They went to their familiar Drexel Hall quarters in the old Indian School and met quite a reception. . . . They were greeted by one of the Sisters at the front door and told to move on. . . . Sisters attending summer school at the college have had all of Drexel to themselves. . . . One of the Bears was dumbfounded that anyone on the campus, even a Sister, looked sternly at him when he said timidly, "Sister, we're Bears." . . . It is not known whether the night-oil burning nun rejoined with "You look more like Wolves to me." . . . Actually, the Chicago Bears entourage is more polite and quiet than some St. Joe students . . . Only their cafeteria appetites and size single them out over winter-time campus inhabitants. . . . George Halas deserves a pat on the back for generously turning over all proceeds of the August 15th Bear exhibition game to the college-community stadium fund. . . . Oldtimers who remember periods of coolness between town-folk and college are probably surprised that both bodies have their heads together in a project that will bring great benefits to both. . . . The school board's reply to Father Roof's invitation that college and city share a good, permanent-seat football stadium, was unanimously favorable. . . . Father Russel Scheidler, '19-'25, Fairfield, Montana, is an official with the National Catholic Rural Life Conference . . . he is visiting displaced persons zones in Germany, Austria and Italy as a member of the National Catholic Resettlement Council . . . he reports that DP's he has seen are, for the most part, good, sound people, the kind we need in the U.S.A. . . . John Labadie, '33-'35, an army lieutenant, is in charge of the Stuttgart Post-News, weekly post newspaper in Germany . . . one headline declared "FIAT FIRM OFFERS ONE-DAY SERVICE ON NEW AUTOS." . . . European duty has its compensations. . . . Remi Hazinski, '40-'42, visited the campus last week with Mrs. Hazinski and their two young sons. . . . Remi is working in a Milwaukee pharmaceutical lab. . . . Richard Briede, a brand-new alumnus, will be united in marriage to Miss Eleanore Jaminski August 28 in St. John Baptist Church, Virginia, Minnesota. . . . Two SJC faculty members, Thomas Dumas, instructor in economics and a Rensselaer attorney, and Daniel Connor, instructor in music, were August bridegrooms. . . . A card from Father Edwin Kaiser, '09-'15, traveling in Canada, states that he was able to see practically all of the growing St. Joe alumni delegation stationed at and around Notre Dame. . . . John Chamberlain, '43-'46, an academy graduate, is an army x-ray technician with a hospital unit in Tokyo . . . the recent Jap earthquake was forecast as early as mid-December, John wrote his parents. . . . Champion golfer of the Alumni Association is Rev. Henry Schaeffer, '20, pastor of St. Henry's Church, Cincinnati. Father Schaeffer took the honors at the oldtimers' tournament, Aug. 16. . . . Funeral rites for Henry Lucks, Sr., father of the Very Rev. Henry A. Lucks, president of St. Joseph's, were held Friday, Aug. 20, at Beatrice, Nebr. An octogenarian, Mr. Lucks died Aug. 17 of a heart ailment.

Ralph V. Annen, Dies

The prayers of the Alumni are asked for the happy repose of the soul of Ralph V. Annen, who died in Chicago on July 24. Ralph was a student at St. Joseph from September 1911 to June 1914. A brother George, also an alumnus, is among the bereaved relatives.

Panel Sessions Help Catholic Builders

At the Recreation Center Panel, A. M. Strauss of the architectural firm of A. M. Strauss & Associates presided and Mr. Donald L. Kline, building consultant of the National Recreation Association, was the principal speaker. This session attracted an unexpectedly large attendance showing a wide interest in recreation centers.

At the Church Panel, Gerald Barry and J. Sanford Shanley, architects, together with Theodore C. Barbarossa, Emil Frei and Maurice Lavanoux, all noted authorities in church construction and decoration, were heard.

At the Remodeling Panel, Edward G. Gavin, editorial director of "The American Builder," presided and was assisted by authorities from principal building and remodeling fields: John J. Riordan on lighting; Rupert J. Webber on plumbing; Joseph S. Kearney on heating; Philip Creden, Edward Hines Lumber Co. on materials; and W. J. Lynch, Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. Dirksen Mark 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dirksen of Osgood, Ohio, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary, Sunday, July 25, with three priest sons officiating at a Solemn High Mass of thanksgiving in St.

Nicholas church, Osgood.

Mr. Dirksen was among the first students enrolled at St. Joseph's, 1891-'93, and had been a teacher in Ohio's public schools until his retirement a few years ago. Four sons of the golden jubilarians have been students at Collegeville: Clarence B. 1913-'14, the Rev. Aloys H. 1914-'20, and president of the College, 1938-'44, at present Professor of Religion at Notre Dame University, the Rev. Cletus F. 1925-'26, Assistant Professor of Economics on the campus, and the Rev. Richard F. 1930-'34, assistant at St. Augustine's parish, Minister, Ohio.

Contact! extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Dirksen, and best wishes for good health and many more years together.

Convention An Outstanding Success

poorest of the Victorian creations."

Homer Hoyt, president of Homer Hoyt Associates, city planners, told delegates that churches and schools should be erected so residents needn't cross heavy traffic arteries to get to them. Mr. Hoyt covered the entire subject of "Understanding Community Growth and Need Factors for Better and Longer Range Service" in the planning session. He was followed by John J. Flad, architect, who outlined the essentials of plot planning for the Catholic building group.

C. Theodore Larson, associate editor, Architectural Forum, answered the question, "The New Look, or the Old, in Architecture?" in an illustrated paper showing numerous architectural styles from all over the world. Mr. Larson urged delegates to heed Cardinal Stritch's advice in making the best use of the newest developments in design, materials, and architectural styles.

Grunsfeld Urges Programming

The task of selecting and working with the architect was covered by Ernest A. Grunsfeld, Jr., noted architect-lecturer. Mr. Grunsfeld emphasized the need for programming construction projects. "Should There Be a Diocesan Planning Board?" was discussed by Rev. James E. Doyle, executive secretary of the Chicago Archdiocesan Planning Board. Father Doyle told delegates of the difficulties his board is encountering and the steps they are taking to solve them, in the vast Congress Street widening project in Chicago where millions of dollars worth of church property is involved.

The ideal relationship between the administrator, the architect and the contractor was the subject of George F. Denniston, executive manager, Eggers and Higgins, architects. George F. Hutter, president, Hutter Construction Co., told delegates that the materials shortage condition was easing and that when proper planning with the architect and the contractor is undertaken, building can be achieved in reasonable time.

In the equipment group, Miss Isabelle Peterson, executive dietitian, Swift & Co., presented an illustrated talk on "Planning or Re-Planning the Institutional Kitchen" and Samuel R. Lewis, heating and ventilating engineer, pointed the way for the economical and efficient heating and air conditioning of Catholic buildings.

Sisters representing three religious orders, the Society of the Precious Blood, the Sisters of the Holy Cross, and the Sisters of Mercy, reviewed the sister's viewpoint. The Class Room's design and requirements were discussed by Sister Mary Grace, C. PP. S.; The Convent and College Building was the subject of Sister Mary Madeleva, C.S.C.; and The Hospital was covered by Sister Mary Reginald, R.S.M. These outstanding women from the Catholic educational and institutional field were among the best received speakers at the convention.

"When Will Conditions Be 'Right' for Building?" was answered by Kenneth K. Stowell, editor-in-chief, Architectural Record. Mr. Stowell said that great building programs had been undertaken by industry to supply the material needs of mankind and urged Catholic builders to proceed at once with their plans because the spiritual needs are of far greater importance.

C. L. Staples, managing editor, Institutions Magazine, in a brief address, "Keeping Pace With America, Institutions Build," told administrators where they could secure building and remodeling information. A booklet giving information sources was distributed to delegates. The booklet was especially prepared by Institutions for the convention.

In the panel sessions which were held Thursday afternoon, July 1, some of the country's leading authorities conducted intensive discussion periods on the foremost topics of the day.

Edward G. Gavin, editorial director, The American Builder, was chairman of the Remodeling Panel, and was assisted by John J. Riordan, lighting engineer, Commonwealth Edison Co.; Philip Creden, advertising director, Edward Hines Lumber Co.; Rupert J. Weber, president, Jacob G. Weber Co., heating engineers and contractors; and Joseph S. Kearney, Northwestern Plumbing and Heating Co.

Maurice G. Lavanoux, secretary of the Liturgical Arts Society; Theodore C. Barbarossa, National Sculpture Society; Emil Frei, designer; J. Sanford Shanley and Gerald Barry, architects conducted the Church Panel.

Clark G. Harris, staff architect, Tarren S. Holmes, Inc.; Thomas Higgins, director, Bureau Building Surveys, Chicago Board of Education; and Raymond Welch, conducted the School Panel.

Nine Bishops Attend

The Recreation Center Panel was conducted by Donald L. Kline, consultant, National Recreation Association.

Rev. Gustav J. Schultheiss, James Fahy, and Eugene Hult of Institutional Commodities, Inc. of New York conducted the Institutional Panel.

Nine members of the Catholic hierarchy attended the convention, four of them acting as presiding officers. They included Cardinal Stritch; Archbishop Kiley of Milwaukee; Bishop Musio of Steubenville, Ohio; Bishop Bennett of La Fayette in Indiana; Bishop Marling of Kansas City; Bishop Griffin of Springfield, Ill.; Bishop O'Brien of Chicago; Bishop Ryan of Bismarck, N. D.; and Bishop Cuinco of the Philippine Islands. Delegates from Brazil, India and Cuba were also registered.

At the close of the convention Bishop Marling outlined plans for the 1949 convention and exposition which will be held in Chicago.

Some of the Speakers Who Addressed Catholic Building Convention

Most Rev. John K. Mussio, Bishop of Steubenville, O., who presided at The Construction and Materials Group session.

His Eminence Samuel Cardinal Stritch as he delivered the inspiring keynote address, "Objectives of Catholic Building." Cardinal Stritch called the convention and exposition a much needed service for Catholic builders and expressed the hope the event would be repeated.

Most Rev. John G. Bennett, Bishop of La Fayette in Indiana, who presided at The Planning Group session, June 30.

The Sister's Viewpoint was given by Sister Mary Grace, C.P.P.S., Sister Mary Reginald, R. S. M., and Sister Mary Madeleva, C.S.C.

Standing: Rev. John M. Lefko, C.P.P.S., originator of the convention; James V. Malone, general manager; and Very Rev. Henry A. Lucks, president of St. Joseph's, confer with (seated) Most Rev. Joseph M. Marling, C.P.P.S., auxiliary bishop of Kansas City; Most Rev. Vincent J. Ryan, bishop of Bismarck, N. D.; and Very Rev. S. W. Oberhauser, Provincial of the Society of the Precious Blood at the close of the convention.

The Institutional Panel was conducted by James Fahy, Eugene Hult and Rev. Gustav J. Schultheiss of Institutional Commodities, Inc., New York City.

The School Panel was handled by Clark G. Harris, Raymond Welch and Thomas Higgins.
